3	Description Policy reform studies are part of the development of public policy studies that emphasize aspects of policy change and policy termination. In this context, students are able to describe the stages of policy starting from policy making, implementation, evaluation, and reform. This course introduces and invites students to understand and be able to explain an idea where a change is introduced and controlled without judging the goodness or badness of the change that is being introduced. This process of change includes issues of reform in various fields, the role and involvement of policy elites, Characteristics of Uncertainty in developing countries, ideological paradigms and legacy of the past, power and vulnerability: government concerns. Narrative arenas of conflict both in the public sphere and in the internal bureaucracy.

	The lecture material also presents models of policy reform in developed and developing countries so that students know and understand the experiences of other countries in carrying out basic policy reforms in analyzing the condition of policy reform in Indonesia. The shift from the Old Order Government to the New Order Government under President Suharto (1965 – 1997) and to the Reformation Order brought the consequences of policy changes. Micro and macro economic policy reforms, the legacy of the slumping Old Order economic conditions, the success stories of the New Order economic development, the negative side of the New Order economic development, neo-liberal views on the development of the New Order political economy, the arena of competition (conflict) between factions - the technocrats , the CSIS (Lobbyist) group, the State Secretariat nationalist economic group, and a technology group based at BPPT,
