| 3  | Description: This course studies the basic concepts related to local government and the concept of decentralization as part of the delegation of authority from the central government to local governments. Decentralization has become a mandate of the 1945 Constitution and has received significant attention from the founding fathers of the Republic of Indonesia. The concept of decentralization leads to the existence of regional government as well as multilevel governance. The scope of Regional Government consists of: Regional Government, Regional Autonomy, Autonomous Regions, Community Participation in Regional Government, Regional Finance, and Regional Personnel. Various other important issues related include: theoretical battles on the concepts, benefits and instruments of local government, effectiveness and resources needed to achieve effectiveness.  |                                    |                                       |                            |  |
